

The Evelina Mediation Service

A confidential service that supports families, patients and healthcare professionals to recognise and resolve conflict.

Evelina Mediation Service

Sometimes families, patients and healthcare professionals disagree. This can happen when:

- communication between family members and the healthcare team may be difficult, or may have broken down
- families may want a treatment for their child that the healthcare professionals do not believe will help
- family members may have beliefs which prevent them from agreeing to a plan of medical care
- a young person may have different views from their family about their medical care

These situations are difficult for everyone involved. Most of the time, they are resolved through careful discussion and allowing time to talk and think things through. But sometimes an agreement cannot be reached.

This is where the Evelina Mediation Service can help.

About mediation

Mediation is a confidential, voluntary process which gives those involved in a disagreement a chance to talk things through with the support of a trained mediator.

The mediator will have separate discussions with all those involved.

Then, if everyone agrees to it, the mediator will invite the parties to meet together to see if an overall agreement can be reached.

Mediators do not take sides or make decisions. Their role is to make sure that everyone has a chance to express their concerns and have their point of view heard.

Who are the mediators?

The mediators are either independent of the hospital, or work at the hospital, but not in the speciality or ward where your child receives their care. The Evelina Mediation Service is overseen by the Medical Mediation Foundation, an independent organisation which provides mediation services to the NHS.

Confidentiality

Everything that is said during mediation is confidential. Only the terms of any agreement reached will be put in the medical notes.

The only times when a mediator will pass on what is said, is if:

- they believe there is a significant risk of harm to any person involved in the disagreement
- they are concerned that either side is breaking the law
- they are ordered to do so by a court.

If this happens, the mediator is under a duty to inform the appropriate authorities, and will let the people involved know they will be doing so.

Accessing the service

The Evelina Mediation Service is available to parents, young people, and staff at Evelina London Children's Hospital and Children's Community Services.

Referral requests can be made by:

- patients
- parents/carers
- staff
- the Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS)

Referrals can be made by email, phone or text. Details can be found in the 'Contact us' box over the page.

Referral requests will be responded to within 2 working days.

Meeting location

The mediator will discuss where the meetings will be held with you. Usually, mediation meetings will take place at Evelina London Children's Hospital or at a community location. However, if this is difficult, alternative arrangements may be made. Some conversations and meetings can also take place virtually if this is easier.

Cost of mediation

The mediation service is free of charge.

What do I need to bring with me?

You do not need to bring anything with you. However, you can bring someone to support you, if you want to.
