

Be part of a world-leading centre
of life-changing care
for children, young people and their families

Evelina London Children's Hospital cares for children and young people from across south London and south east England. We offer a unique range of services from antenatal diagnosis through to childhood, into adolescence and on into adult life. Children's services at Evelina London are mainly located in our state-of-the-art building at St Thomas' Hospital, but we also provide care to young patients in the community in Lambeth and Southwark.

Our mission – why are we here?

To provide world-leading and responsive healthcare involving children and their families.

Our vision – what are we trying to achieve?

To be a world-leading centre of life-changing care for children, young adults and their families.

Our values

Put patients first. Take pride in what we do.

Respect others. Act with integrity. Strive to be the best.

Our background

Evelina London Children's Hospital is part of Guy's and St Thomas' NHS Foundation Trust.

Our history

The original Evelina Hospital for Sick Children opened in 1869 on Southwark Bridge Road, London. It was funded by Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild in memory of his wife, Evelina, who had died along with their son who was born prematurely.

In its first year, more than 300 children were admitted to the hospital's 30 beds. By 1900, bed numbers had doubled, with more than 1,000 admissions and more than 20,000 children visiting the hospital each year.

During the Second World War, Evelina closed to inpatients to serve as a casualty post. It was hit by bombs three times during the Blitz in 1940, 1941 and 1944.

Following the creation of the National Health Service in 1948, Evelina merged with Guy's Hospital and moved to the newly opened Guy's Tower in 1973.

Over the next 30 years, as hospital services for children became more specialised, the children's department developed a worldwide reputation in a number of areas, including children's heart surgery, nephrology and neurology.

Designed by children for children

In 2005, Evelina London moved to a new purpose-built children's hospital at St Thomas'.

The award-winning building has been described as 'a hospital that does not feel like a hospital'. Its floors are themed around the natural world and it has a huge, glass-roofed conservatory.

The building was designed around the needs of the children and their families. Our young patients were involved in developing designs for the building, as well as our distinctive 'fingerprint' logo.

Evelina London was the first new children's hospital to be built in London for more than 100 years.

It is now the second largest provider of children's services in London.

Savannah is home to Camel and Dragonfly wards. With 44 beds, these wards cover three main specialties:

- Cardiology, including high dependency cardiac beds
- Orthopaedics and spinal surgery
- Neurology and inherited metabolic diseases.

Mountain – level 5

Mountain is home to a 42-bed ward that incorporates both medical and surgical general/specialist paediatrics, a high dependency unit and complex ENT surgery.

Sky – level 6

Sky is home to our offices and administrative facilities.

Other facilities

● Children's Accident & Emergency – our dedicated children's A&E department is located close to Evelina London at St Thomas' next to the adult A&E. A team of specialist children's doctors and nurses care for patients in this busy unit.

● Neonatal unit – the neonatal unit comprises 18 intensive care beds, six high dependency beds and 24 special care cots. We provide care for a range of specialties including neurological, renal, cardiac and metabolic disorders and specialist surgery.

● Community services – our team of specialist doctors, community nurses and therapists work in community settings across Lambeth and Southwark to manage a range of developmental, physical and social issues.

Our people

Our patients

We are proud to serve the vibrant and diverse London boroughs of Lambeth and Southwark. We also provide specialist services to young patients from south east England and further afield. We care for more than 55,000 young patients every year.

As the only London hospital with highly specialised women's and children's services on one site, we can look after patients from antenatal diagnosis through childhood, into adolescence and on into adult services.

What our patients and families say about us:

“The care I received at Evelina London was absolutely, positively wonderful. The doctors, nurses and play specialists are very funny and helpful.”
Keith, young heart patient

“I'm so grateful to the doctors at Evelina London for all that they've done for my son.”
Victoria, a mother

“The doctors and nurses are amazing. Every time we are there, they've made things so easy and we feel at home when at Evelina London.”
Monica, a mother

“One of the things that struck us during the course of my son's treatment was the sheer number of clinical professionals involved.”
Michael, a father

Our staff

The dedication and skill of our staff is what makes Evelina London successful. We are committed to recruiting and retaining the best staff, providing them with the support and opportunity to deliver great care.

With 13,000 staff across Guy's and St Thomas', we are one of the biggest local employers and almost 40% of our staff live locally. We encourage and support our staff to develop their careers with a wide range of research and professional development opportunities.

What our staff say about us:

“I like my job, I like the location, I like the staff I work with every day and I like the specialist care and specialist areas we work in.”
Claire, senior staff nurse

“I work here because it's the best! I feel like everyday I'm involved in pioneering stuff, establishing treatments and I find it all fascinating and interesting. I love that it's challenging and I'm still learning something new every day.”
Rachel, staff nurse

“I work at Evelina because of the integrated way everyone works with all the specialist professionals. All the professionals here respect each other and their roles. There are lots of learning opportunities working here – and there's also a good social life!”
Sarah, occupational therapist

“I like the environment I work in – it's friendly, welcoming and inviting for the children and their families and not at all scary. Everyone here is friendly and it has a good reputation. I like being part of the team who provide high standards of care.”
Emily, staff nurse

Our services

Evelina London is at the heart of a network of children's health services in Lambeth and Southwark and across south east England. We provide a comprehensive range of children's health services, so that we are able to look after patients from antenatal diagnosis through childhood, into adolescence and on into adult services. We are the only hospital in London to have highly specialised women's and children's services on one site. This means that our youngest patients can get the specialist care they need on the same hospital site as their mothers.

Our specialties

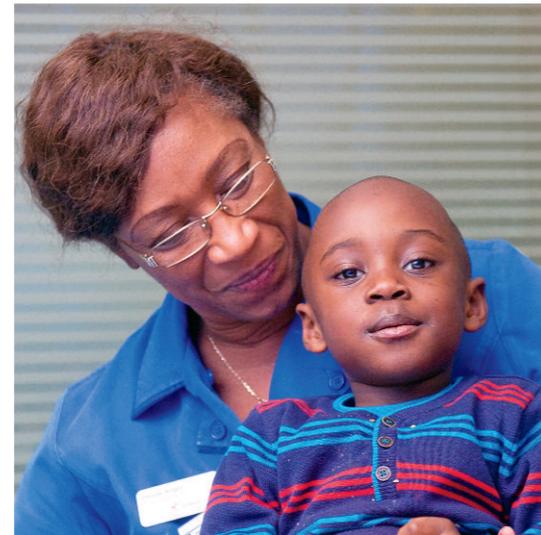

Neonatal care

For the youngest patients, our neonatal intensive care unit cares for babies born prematurely and those with surgical, cardiac, neurological, renal and metabolic disorders. Staff within this unit have the opportunity to work as part of a multi-disciplinary team, rotating through these areas to develop new skills and experience.

Ambulatory care

We provide a high quality service across all the specialties for children and families from birth to 18 years. Most children will gain their first experience of a hospital at our outpatient department. It is a busy, buzzing place that provides a good opportunity to introduce health promotion and listen to the families concerns.

Within this service we offer staff opportunities to rotate and work within the different areas to learn and develop new skills and knowledge.

Tertiary services

We provide a comprehensive range of services, including cardiology, orthopaedics, neurology and inherited metabolic diseases. Young patients tend to travel from further away for this specialist care.

We provide a holistic child and family-centred approach to the management of children with chronic lifelong conditions requiring complex care, building relationships with families and providing support at the most difficult times.

Surgery

Our surgical teams treat patients with a wide range of conditions, performing highly complex and specialist surgery. This multi-disciplinary team provides support to families before, during and after surgery. All our teams are highly motivated with excellent communication skills. They enjoy working in an energetic, challenging and, at times, demanding area.

Research

We lead a huge amount of child health research aimed at improving patient care, developing better treatments and increasing our understanding of disease. Our growing portfolio of more than 80 national and international studies involves more than 3,000 patients.

Evelina London's clinicians work closely with families, charities and schools on all kinds of child health research including:

- Allergy
- Cardiology
- Orthopaedics
- Asthma
- Neurosciences
- Public health

We are home to the Evelina Newborn Imaging Centre, part of the Centre for the Developing Brain, a major neonatal research facility in collaboration with King's College London.

Why choose us?

Evelina London's reputation is built on the high quality, compassionate and innovative care we offer our patients. This is only possible through the dedication and skills of all our staff. If you join us, you could work in the heart of London, in great facilities, with the support of committed colleagues. It goes without saying that you will be dedicated and caring. In return, we make sure our staff have excellent development opportunities, whatever their role in the team.

Work-life balance

We are committed to helping staff strike a balance between work and home life through a range of supportive policies:

- On-site nurseries and childcare vouchers – we have a nursery on the hospital site, with limited places. We also offer childcare vouchers.
- Help with accommodation – our accommodation office can help with your housing needs, from short term residential properties to links with housing associations.
- Sports and social club with on-site gyms and swimming pool.
- On-site cinema.

Your education and development

Your education and development is important to us.

We work with our academic partners, King's College London and London South Bank University, to provide exceptional education and training opportunities for our staff.

We help staff develop their skills by funding further studies or paying for them to undertake training on specialised equipment and attend professional seminars to learn and share ideas with their peers.

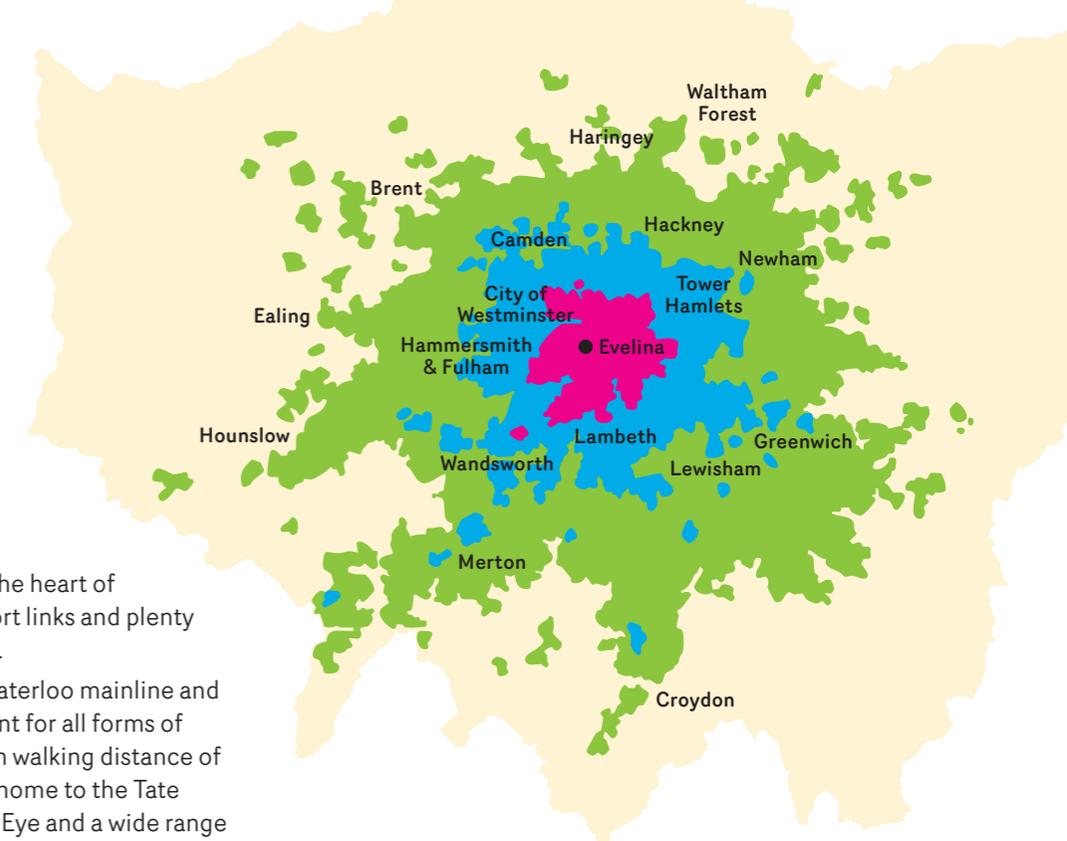

Nursing staff working at Evelina London have the support of a team of paediatric development nurses and clinical educators to develop clinical skills and expertise.

We are committed to clinical research and encourage and support staff to develop and conduct research and patient studies to bring the latest treatments to our patients at the earliest opportunity.
