

Bath board information

This leaflet explains how to measure for a bath board. If you have any questions or concerns, please speak to your child's occupational therapist.

What is a bath board?

A bath board goes across the bath tub and sits on the edges of the bath. It lets children who have movement restrictions get in and out of the bath safely.

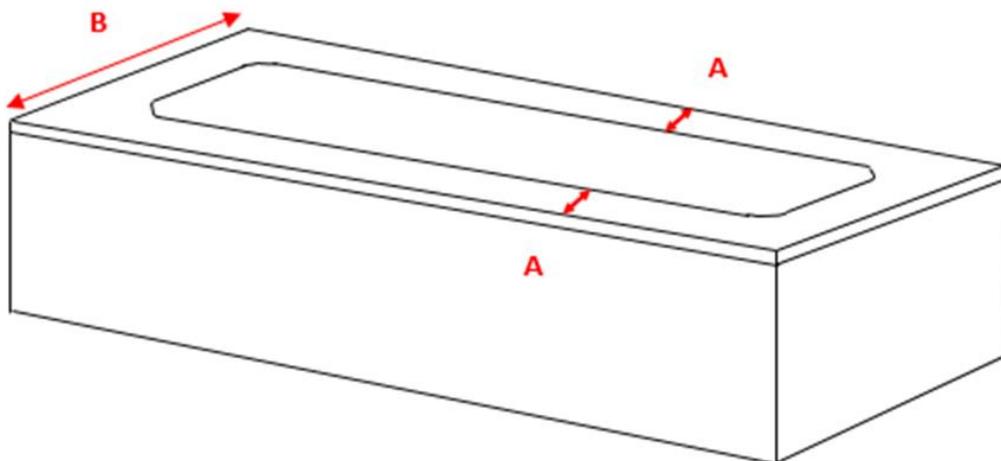

It also gives a stable, seated base when sitting down using a handheld shower.

How to measure your bath for a bath board

Not all baths are suitable for use with a bath board. The width of the internal bath ledges (measurements A on the diagram below) must be at least 18mm wide on each side. If they are not this wide, the bath board cannot be secured safely and will not be safe to use.

Measure the width of bath (measurement B on diagram below). This will give you the size of the board you should order. The bath board length should be the same size as the width of the bath. If the width of the bath does not match a bath board size, you can order a longer board, as long as it does not hang over the outer edge of the bath by more than 20mm. As a guide, most average size baths are around 686mm (27 inches) wide. Baths come in lots of different sizes, so it is very important that you measure to get the right size for your bath.

Where to buy a bath board

Below are some of the places where you can buy bath boards, but there are others. The prices are given as a guide only, and were correct when this leaflet was published.

Some suppliers

Safety advice

Make sure you follow the manufacturer's installation instructions carefully when fitting the bath board. Test the bath board is secured in position and does not slip before it is used. If there is a fault with the product, do not use it, and contact the manufacturer.

Useful sources of information

Your child's occupational therapist can help your child practice getting in and out of the bath safely whilst they are in the hospital.
